Not a Bad Showing on November 8

The results of November 8’s election are in, and San Francisco’s new political picture has begun to develop. As far as SF Building Trades-endorsed candidates and ballot initiatives fared, well... It could’ve gone better. It was certainly no blowout for our causes, though. While we’re disappointed with San Franciscans’ resounding “yes” vote on the independent-Bureau-of-Sanitation-and-Streets-killing Proposition B, and we regret that some of our preferred candidates couldn’t eke out a win, we still have plenty to celebrate. The people voted yes on Prop L and handed both their building trades workers and themselves a big victory by ensuring significant investment in our mass transit infrastructure for all and good maintenance and construction jobs for us for years to come. SF voters also defeated Prop D, the skilled-and-trained-mandate-killing residential “affordable” housing initiative that wasn’t. Penure this page to learn which SF Building Trades-endorsed and -opposed politicians and ideas won and which ones lost, and by how much.

Final results are accurate as of December 1 and are rounded up when applicable. All information sourced from the SF Department of Elections.
